

Paul Shawn Marceaux, Director,
Center for Archeological Research
University of Texas, San Antonio

<http://car.utsa.edu/AboutCAR/StaffPages/SMarceaux.html>

BIO: Dr. Marceaux is the new Director of the Center for Archeological Research at University of Texas at San Antonio, replacing Dr. Steve Tomka. Shawn received a B.A degree from Texas state University, a M.A degree from University of Memphis, and a Ph.D. from University of Texas, Austin, all degrees are in Anthropology.

Dr. Marceaux has more than 15 years of experience in the fields of archaeology and anthropology. He has held positions in academics, federal agencies, and the private sector, and conducted fieldwork in Texas, the southeastern United States, California, Crimea, Italy, Peru, and Portugal. His research interests include archaeology, ethno history, the study of cultures in contact, GIS, and technological applications in archaeology. Much of his work focuses on Native-made ceramics and colonial European materials recovered from sites in Texas. His research aims to examine and elucidate the extent to which changes in material culture are related to known historical events and processes.

